SUBJECT: EU-ARMENIA PARLIAMENTARY COOPERATION DOCUMENT

YEREVAN 00000257 001.2 OF 004

¶1. (SBU) SUMMARY AND COMMENT: Armenian and European parliamentarians agreed to a "Final Statement and Recommendations of the EU-Armenia Parliamentary Cooperation Committee meeting" (text below) on April 8. The text lists 41 points of interest in EU-Armenia relations, and is remarkable for its comprehensive inclusion of subjects that expose Armenia to controversy, such as its handling of the post-election period in March 2008, even if the wording on several sensitive points seems somewhat finessed. We regard this as a useful reminder to the Armenian authorities that the international community remains concerned about democracy and human rights issues. The text was not released and has not been made public to date.

¶2. (SBU) BIO NOTE: Avet Adonts is chairman of the Armenian parliament's European Integration Committee, is a member of the governing coalition, and is understood to be the pick to be the next Armenian Ambassador to the EU, NATO, and Belgium, starting sometime this summer. Adonts was previously former President Kocharian's foreign policy adviser and has held the personal rank of ambassador since that time. Adonts is smart, capable, a proficient English speaker, and one of the few true professionals in the Prosperous Armenia party stable. He has been a good embassy contact; a defender of GOAM policy but one who can engage thoughtfully on difficult issues.
